MARINE ECOLOGY & NATURAL HISTORY

FORT ROSS

Help students connect with themselves, each other, and the natural world with an experience they'll never forget!

SOCIAL & EMOTIONAL LEARNING

Put away the screens, leave the desk behind, and let students interact with each other in the great outdoors. Our focus on team-building and small group sizes facilitate lasting social & emotional growth and contribute to a positive classroom environment.

MARINE ECOLOGY & NATURAL HISTORY

Engage in hands-on science activities with the experts at the Fort Ross Marine Ecology program. Study the pinnipeds, survey the tidepools, hike through the redwoods and explore the beautiful California coastline.

OUTDOOR LIVING

Students sleep in tents, help with daily chores, and spend their days hiking with our experienced fieldguides. Living outdoors and closer to nature helps students connect with the natural world in new and unexpected ways.

CAMPING WITH FIELDGUIDES "FAMILY STYLE"

Our unique "family-style" camping format allows staff and students to connect with each other and nature in wonderful and unique ways. The format of our programs maximizes the amount of time students spend outside and increases their connection to the very place they spend their days learning about. We take care of all campground reservations and permits, and provide a full camping setup including, tents, an outdoor kitchen, cleaning supplies, and food for the programs. Students, staff, teachers, and chaperones work together with our fieldguides to complete daily chores such as cooking & cleaning. Sleeping, eating, and living together outdoors, roasting marshmallows and singing songs around the campfire creates a unique outdoor education experience that students will remember for years for years to come.
